two things. First: Twelve weeks a year your wife will be a maniac. Keep that always in mind and treat her accordingly. Second: Don't ever allow twin beds in your home. Sleep with your wife. This family has never had a divorce and we don't want any in the future. Little misunderstandings and squabbles grow into insurmountable domestic obstacles when the husband sleeps in one bed and his wife in another. If you're a little mad or hurt when bedtime comes and you go to separate rooms or into separate beds you'll get up equally mad or hurt in the morning. The grouch will grow and multiply with disastrous results. But it's hard to stay mad when you are close together in the same bed. Don't have twin beds."

"I RELATED that conversation in front of some young couples in Long Island society recently," continued my acquaintance. "And a sweet young thing with war paint all over her face and a dress up to her knees at the bottom and down to her stomach at the top answered, 'Why, I think that's positively indecent.'"

"And there you are. That girl has no children and probably never will have. And still there are those who say customs in this country are not deteriorating."

I WAS delighted. I would have been delighted with this man's conversation if he had been the conductor or the brakeman instead of a scion of one of our most famous families, and writing a TV after his name, like a king.

But I was particularly gratified to find that one of our greatest American families is still conducting itself in accordance with those plain, fine old moral principles that first made it great. I was happy to find that an American can be prominent and a scion of an old family and still be a real man. I was positively elated that I grew to know so well a young man who stands as a living example that blood will tell.

I spent three days with a perfect gentleman—as perfect a gentleman in all the many meanings of the word as one could possibly meet. And I left him with the definite knowledge that even wealth and damn fool training cannot destroy really inherent strength of character.

I never would have expected to find such a splendid man belonging to such a family. For it always had been my idea that those great American families have deteriorated miserably. I found I was wrong—and was mighty glad of it.

Earl Mayes Arrested After Ford Trip From the Middle West

Torrance police are investigating the manner in which Earl C. Mayes of Arkansas came into possession of the Ford roadster in which he drove across the continent. The lad, who is 19, was arrested by Officers Edwards and Stroh last Friday and interrogated by Chief Louie Patterson. He asserts that he left Nebraska in company with one Patrick Morrell and that Morrell owned the Ford. Mayes says Morrell left him one night in the desert in Wyoming, saying he was going for water for the radiator. Mayes declares Morrell did not return and that he drove on to the coast after working for several days along the way. Chief Patterson elicited the aid of the Los Angeles police in investigating the boy's story. Mayes is being held here on suspicion of grand larceny.

Fred Walters Is Found Guilty on Charge of Assault

A jury of twelve women heard witnesses testify that Fred W. Walters, 25, beat John A. Bowers, 71, and locked him in a tool house on the Wilson lease in the local oil field.

After an hour's deliberation the ladies returned a verdict of guilty and Walters paid a fine of $150.

Five-Year-Old Hit by Car

ple in the coupe, five passengers in the Dodge, and two in the Ford touring car. All escaped with slight cuts and bruises.

Occupants Unhurt
"Husky" Cook and Nathan Johnson, of Lomita, and their girl companions were uninjured, and their car but slightly damaged, Saturday evening, when a Ford coupe driven by J. D. Cleek of Torrance crashed into a Dodge car near Arlington and Camino Real. The five passengers in the Dodge also escaped injury. Cook was following the Dodge and blew out a tire when he applied his brakes to avoid collision with the wreck. Driving east on the Wilmington-Redondo Boulevard Sunday afternoon, Charles Watts of Sun and Cypress Streets attempted to pass another car. A large car holding to the middle of the boulevard struck Watts' Ford and knocked it for a new axle and wheel. No one was injured.

I says to Hudd

Some people seem to have an awful time getting on in this world and getting their bills paid and one thing and another. And Hudd says yes some folks that buy on time don't know when time leaves off and eternity begins.

And what started all this was a friend of mine who's always telling about what big grocery bills they have and how she never has any money left after she has paid for the family eats.

And I happened to be down at her house one day and she was clearing away her table and I helped her and I set several things aside to be used later.

And she said it's no use we might as well throw them out they won't keep. And I said haven't you an ice box and she said no we can't afford an ice box it takes all the money we can make to buy the food.

And I'll let you figure out the moral for yourself.
